

You ask for parting words, Madam Editor? In substance, you have heard them all already. The end is like the beginning and all the years in between: variations on a few themes. I remember with delight a little story you wrote in first-year French; and I hope you haven't forgotten the day the lyre-bird flew into the classroom and the glass of the window-panes reverted to sand. Mutual offerings, mutual awakenings!

As Mr. McMahon and I go waltzing into the sunset, as they say, it is conversations, voices (written and spoken), and faces that will go with me, at least as long as I can hang to my wits.

Yes, Betsy, of course it's all right to read novels for pleasure, and poetry too. That's what they were written for. Too hard sometimes to enjoy? Try rereading your Baudelaire during vacation or better yet, next autumn in the Tuileries Gardens. Enjoyment, like most other things, takes practice. I don't think we were born liking Mozart or Debussy or Matisse, were we?

"Beauty (really can be) convulsive," you know, Bonny. Try standing on your head and looking at the world upside down. Or set a rocking-chair on a bridge or a butterfly on a star, and you may discover, as the surrealists did, the secret of always seeing the world as if for the first time.

Yes, it really is a good thing, Dominique, to know a buttercup from a hawthorne blossom; for buttercups seem to play games along the banks of the Vivonne, while hawthorns seem made for higher things: gracing gothic altars in the month of May or mysteriously transforming black-eyed impudent little girls into azure-eyed goddesses in the garden of Tansonville! If you didn't know the difference, you

A Valedictory

Anne P. Jones

THANK-YOU

We would like to extend best wishes to Anne P. Jones, professor of French, and John F. McMahon, professor of German, both of whom are retiring at the end of this year. Their contribution to the quality of Lawrence has been appreciated.

might get lost and mistake Swann's Way for the Guer-mantes' Way and never find "your own way home" to Com-bray.

Suppose we look now at the language of our text instead of the story or ideas. Do you notice anything about the tenses of the verbs, the kind of vocabulary, the syntax? Is there imagery? Even in first-year French, you can see how language shapes thought. That's why we give you "real" literature from the beginning.

Registration time again. Why don't you take this anthropology course along with French Black African Literature, Robin, and see what happens? . . . Physics, Kate? Just the thing if you want to go on in French! Time and space in modern writing are rarely Newtonian.

It was a long train-ride, wasn't it, Abby? That one we took from Paris to Rome with our typewriter salesman. A dozen trips in one, in all directions, in the past, in the present, in the future. Without ever leaving the train, we visited modern Rome, the Rome of the empire, and the Rome of the Renaissance. We even went down into the underworld, like Vergil, in search of our fathers. It was almost like taking the old Freshman Studies course, for we learned something about art, history, several literatures, the Bible, and science. And even the cries of the mysterious huntsman in the Forest of Fontainebleau: "Do you hear me? What are you looking for? Where are you going? Who are you?" seemed echoes of the questions of all the books we have read together, you and I, and all the generations of students who have preceded you at this university.

Thank you all for the time of my life!

(Mis) guided

To the Editor:

The 21 May issue of the Lawrentian carried an article entitled, "The Lawrentian Guide to the Avenue" by Jeff Hawley and I would like to take this opportunity to voice certain criticisms of that article.

Specifically, my objections are directed toward the paragraph relating to Doris's Super Bar. Of course, Mr. Hawley is entitled to his own opinions, and, needless to say, it is of no particular consequence to me whether he likes the Super Bar or whether he does not. However, I do not believe that he has the right to publish those opinions in the form of derogatory language and twisted facts.

The article is generally devoid of any journalistic quality and, along with its repeated spelling errors, causes this reader to doubt the writer's genuineness. I must here remind (or instruct, as the case may be) Mr. Hawley that "homosexual" is spelled h-o-m-o-s-e-x-u-a-l and that "Pythonism" should be written as P-y-t-h-o-n-i-s-m!

Aside from his apparent homophobia, the writer also seems to suffer from a monochromatic dysfunction because when he says that in the Super Bar "everything looks brown. Brown walls, brown paneling, brown floors, brown bar stools, brown, brown, brown," he is greatly mistaken. I will agree that the paneling is brown and, since the paneling covers the walls, it may also be said that the walls are brown!

(Your logic prof. would be proud of you, Jeff!) However, the floor is covered with a yellow-amber colored vinyl, and the window draperies are also of a yellow-amber color.

Also as a point of clarification, the poster which presently hangs over the jukebox refers to the Third Annual F.V.G.A. Auction which is sponsored by the Fox Valley Gay Alliance, not association. And, if Mr. Hawley had actually looked he would have found that there are few David Bowie selections on the jukebox. It would seem that Jeff was already "done" by the time he "did" number five!

I believe that most any reader would quickly realize that this article seriously lacks responsible criticism, is almost totally without objectivity, and plays up to the most blatant gay stereotypes. For example, all gay people are not interior decorators, nor do we all require a 'decor extraordinaire' as the author suggests when he says, "Funny thing, though, when you walk in here everything looks brown." Nor are all gay people David Bowie fans! Toward the end of the paragraph, Hawley writes, "If you are not a homosexual (sic) a Bicentennial (sick), or a 'miceman' Monty Pythonism (sic), you have no business being here." On the contrary, we do not discriminate! The Super Bar is open to the public, gay and non-gay.

While I object to many of Hawley's comments, none are as insulting and demeaning as his use of the word "fairy." Terms like "fairy," "faggot," "nigger,"

"bitch," et. al. may be expected from certain incredibly ignorant individuals, but one surely would not expect to see them used in a university student newspaper. Such bigoted opinionating does not serve the interests of free speech and can hardly be said to advance enlightenment. Had the author set aside his absurd humor and seriously considered the principle's significant meaning to the "Bicentennial," he would have soon recognized the elitist attitude obvious in his using such a derogatory term.

The struggle for gay rights has encountered numerous obstacles, most of which are built on ignorance and myth. This newspaper article by Jeff Hawley is an example of such ignorance and myth.

With this letter, I have tried to correct several inaccuracies and I may only hope that my effort in that regard is successful. However, the word "fairy" is intolerable and totally unacceptable. Therefore, I believe that we, the gay people of this area, are well within reason to demand an apology from Jeff Hawley and the staff of the Lawrentian.

I trust to hear from you soon regarding this matter and I thank you for your time and attention.

Sincerely in liberation,

Stan. D. Bracclon

Reconsider DeBruin

To the Editor:

Who, may I ask, is Jeff Hawley? He certainly is not qualified to write about Appleton's College Avenue bars! We resent his innuendo that a bar "has a bad reputation" - that one should be "accompanied by football primates" - or be "just naturally greasy."

DeBruin Bar has been in business for almost thirty years. It does not have a bad reputation; a woman is perfectly safe in entering the bar by herself; the only "greasy" customers in our bar are students and there are only one or two of them and our bar has never been considered a "joint".

As to his insinuation that on Saturday mornings DeBruins is a gathering place for alcoholics, I would like to know how many Saturday mornings Mr. Hawley has spent in DeBruin Bar - or how many times he may even have been in the bar at all!! If he were a steady patron, he would know that DeBruin Bar is considered one of the cleanest bars in the City of Appleton; that our customers are decent, clean, law-abiding citizens and that their conversations are intelligent. If Mr. Hawley classifies any one of them as an alcoholic, then we all must be alcoholics, including the non-drinkers that also patronize the bar.

DeBruin Bar is not just a place to drink, but it is also a place to meet. It is not a bar for just Lawrence students to gather, but they are proud to meet their parents there as well. Lee DeBruin was also kind enough to allow the Lawrence students to hold their bartending classes in his bar.

Thank you, Mr. Hawley, for your publicity. Our business has improved and we certainly look forward to serving you some day!

Editors Note

The Lawrentian staff would like to extend a sincere apology to all those who were offended by our recent article concerning the College Avenue bars. It appears we committed a serious editorial error in underestimating the extent to which the article was objectionable in content and less than tasteful in form.

With more attention on our part to such aspects of our publication and continued input by the community such misunderstandings can be avoided. We only hope that our amiable relationship with the people of the Appleton area has not been impaired.

Job Well done

To the Editor:

An open letter to the Lawrence University Bicentennial Commission:

Angela Davis aptly expressed the importance of your efforts: "I am indebted to those who organized in a principled, unrelenting struggle in defense of my right to be here tonight."

We thank all those people who expended their time and energy to challenge our minds and actions by making possible Angela's visit to Appleton.

Gratefully,

Sorting it out

"What was it like to be Editor of the Lawrentian, Susan?" No one has asked me that yet, but I've decided to come to grips with it in case anyone does. Or at least justify for myself all the hours of sleep I've missed.

I realize this is not the usual format for the "good-bye editorial". Traditionally, the Editor offers several heavy messages about the state of the University, often centering on a big question such as "Where are we going?" or the popular, "We lack a sense of community" theme. But if I knew where we were going I'd tell the Long Range Planners—and besides, I've used the lack of community idea at least once.

I'd much rather talk about my experiences as Editor. Some people have misconceptions about the Lawrentian. Did you know that many people on this campus think that what we publish is The Lawrentian Weekly Advertiser? No kidding. In an effort to save time and money, groups and organizations send us all the information they would otherwise ditto off, requesting that "you make it a little more special than a campus note." I have been known to quote advertising rates, which startles some people.

Some creative people think we lack material, so they drop articles off in our mailbox. Or, a group will have a meeting and send us the write-up. We feel people with creative ideas and an eye to expressing them should join our staff. If a group requests coverage of a meeting we'll usually oblige—but we like to send our own reporter.

And speaking of objectivity, many eager freshmen writers characterize the Lawrentian as "dull". Admittedly it often lacks sparkle. But the way to solve the problem is not by writing opinionated articles. Dull stories can be attributed to poor story ideas or our lack of journalistic prowess.

I've noticed some odd things about the campus. Although it seems the faculty is a fairly cohesive group, I feel that each staff and administrative office is working out of a separate university. Often times people in one office seem surprised to hear about what is going on in another office.

At the same time, I feel that the majority of students are located at yet another university. I was really surprised that so few students attended the Long Range Planning meetings. I also wonder what happened to the President's Open Forums? He mentioned them to me with a great show of enthusiasm last fall. I guess we only have Forums when something really big—like the Analytic Studies Report—is made public.

I have had some very worthwhile experiences. The people who hounded me to publicize group activities are the very ones who gave me fresh ideas. I have begun to have a new respect for involved Lawrentians, for whether or not I agree with them, I find their ideas, perceptions, and viewpoints very stimulating. I am most impressed by groups who are actually getting things done. The appearance by Angela Davis in the Appleton East Gymnasium is one example.

Editing the Lawrentian was a good way to end a Lawrence career. I've seen enough inside the University now to know we have some problems. However I am convinced that with faculty and student support and pressure, Long Range Planning and Affirmative Action will not be empty phrases. Jean Erickson and Jim Klick, next year's capable editors, should do a good job of keeping us informed.

Finally, as my nearest and dearest friends (who listened to my complaining and answered the phone) cringe, I can even say I would do it again.

Charges refuted

To the Editor:

My purpose in writing this letter is to expose the inaccuracies of "An Open Letter to Downer Commons," and in no way to become involved in a dispute over philosophies or politics of the United Farm Workers (UFW) movement.

From "An Open Letter . . .", "The lettuce served at Downer is not UFW lettuce and we would like to see the situation changed. 49 percent of the students surveyed by Student Activists on Food and Population replied that they would support a boycott of non-UFW lettuce. We ask that Downer serve UFW lettuce when possible and otherwise boycott head lettuce."

"We can provide you (Downer) with information concerning distributors of UFW produce." (Their suggestion was Cohen and Fielkow Inc.)

Let me answer these false statements by first saying, UFW lettuce is served at Downer when available. "At the present time, the UFW cannot supply the national demand for its' lettuce," stated a Cohen and Fielkow representative.

Secondly, we at Downer have never seen any results of a survey nor were we aware one was taken. How many students were polled and who were they? If 49 percent support a boycott, what about the majority - the remaining 51 percent? Furthermore, a copy of "An Open Letter . . .", with petition attached, was posted in a conspicuous place in the downer lobby by parties unknown. It hung there for several dull days and then was presented to Mrs. McKay, Director of Lawrence Food Services. The Petition contained forty signatures or 3.7 percent of the student boarders who would be affected by the boycott. Which survey are we to believe, the one in front of us or the mysterious survey which is only quoted in "An Open Letter . . ."?

In regard to the suggestion that Cohen and Fielkow Inc. are distributors of UFW produce, I would state that Cohen and Fielkow Inc. supplies well over 90 percent of the Food Services' fresh produce, and have been instructed to send UFW produce when possible since before Sept. 1975.

I feel that perhaps the previously mentioned letter could have been more appropriately directed to the Lawrence students. The Food Services' support of the student concern for the UFW cause is obvious. Equally obvious is the non-support of the students.

As final note of interest, of the five authors of "An Open Letter . . ." which advocates a lettuce boycott, only two are on the board plan, the other three would be totally unaffected by such a boycott.

Problems solved

To the Editor:

"Hey did you hear?" asked Don Alabaca. "Last Wednesday LUCC passed anti-smoking legislation . . . but don't worry, it doesn't change a thing. Dean Lauter was masterful: his 'compromise' pleased everyone, and now nobody will have 'hurt feelings'. Smoking is still allowed in classrooms and non-smokers will continue to breathe the same joyous vapours as smokers. It's nice to realize that the community won't have to worry about change concerning this issue. After all, change is not healthy for a place like Lawrence."

But I say change is necessary. I keep insisting that someday the students here will discover that the university does not exist without them. If fewer students presumed powerlessness, they could become strong enough to run this place themselves.

We could decide the policies towards admissions, hiring, housing, and curriculum — as well as lower the cost of coming here by making maintenance and Downer run efficiently. Until the students can organize themselves for action, the university will be run by the trustees, faculty, and a handful of administration people. I think the present situation is disgusting!

Ultimately, the students' fate will be in their own hands (and they won't know what to do). Some say that the students are dead, but I disagree: they are only in a self-inflicted state of suspended animation!!! Peace and love, babies- 'til Spring '77 . .

Where we aren't

To the Editor:

Several months ago, we wrote a letter to the Lawrentian concerning Dean Lauter's recommendations to law schools. We thought you and the community would like to know how we fared at the schools where Lauter sent late recommendations.

Ed Langer was placed on the waiting list at Cornell. For personal reasons he has to make a decision on graduation day. Therefore it is unlikely that he will attend Cornell even though it is his first choice of law schools.

Clare McCulla was first placed on the waiting lists at Duke and the University of Virginia. She was subsequently denied admittance.

Mary Probst was denied admittance to both Harvard and Stanford.

David Dunlap was placed on the waiting list at Georgetown. He received an off-the-record report from a senior faculty member and former administrator in the law school that the reason why he was placed on the waiting list rather than admitted was because of the late recommendation. David had to pay George Washington Law School $450 by June 1 or he would have lost his place in the class. Consequently, he will not attend Georgetown.

It is important to note that no one whose recommendations were sent in late by Dean Lauter has been admitted to those schools. We recognize that the lateness of the recommendations was not the sole cause of the rejection of the applicants. But the delay in the completion of the application files caused the applications to receive less consideration because most, if not all, of the admission decisions had already been made.

Boycott defined

To the Editor:

To the Lawrence Community: Supporters of the UFW struggle have been charged by Ms. McKay with making unwarranted insinuations concerning Downer's purchasing practices. It should be made clear that Downer's supplier has been instructed to provide the food service with UFW lettuce when available.

A boycott is a concerted refusal to consume certain products. Consuming UFW lettuce only when available and otherwise using non-UFW lettuce is not a boycott in any sense of the word. This action does nothing to force growers to accept free unionization.

Finally, in reply to the charge that the supporters have allowed their personal opinions to enter into this matter we can only agree. We continue to urge members of the Lawrence community to support the UFW struggle.

Thanks, Jack

To the Editor:

An open letter to the Athletic Department and Jack Manwell on behalf of Lawrence Students, Faculty, and Staff.

Dear Sirs:

We would like to take this opportunity to thank you for closing the Drew Street tennis courts for the remainder of the term. Playing tennis would certainly be detrimental to our GPA. We just didn't realize it before. And certainly it's more important that the tennis camps have good courts. After all, they pay money!

We would also like to thank you for not giving us time to contemplate your generous decision. Some foolish children might have actually complained. It's an unfortunate fact that some Lawrence students feel that they should take part in decisions which affect them.

Thank you for guarding our welfare so vigilantly. It's nice to know that we go to a school that cares. Our gratitude is as boundless as your consideration. Keep up the good work.

Love,

Fiji pledges

To the Editor:

The brothers of the Lambda Kappa chapter of Phi Gamma Delta are pleased to announce the pledge class of 1976: Jeff Ballowe, Elliot Berlin, Scott Blood, Noah Dixon, Mike Edmonds, Mike Gentleman, Steve Glowa, Drew Goss, Clint Kohls, Gary Kohls, Tim Lehman, Scott Nordland, Jan North, and Dave Rusch. Our large pledge class assures us that Phi Gamma Delta will remain among the strongest fraternities on campus.

The editors would also like to apologize to Michael Sherman, assistant professor of history, who was erroneously listed as an instructor of history.

OPEN LETTERS TO THE COMMUNITY

To the Editor:

President Smith has asked that the following information be provided. The Lawrence Leadership Fund report covers the period from September 1972 through 9 January 1976 with these results: ($000 omitted)

	Cash	Pledge	Total
Current operating funds	$2,924	$ 19	$2,943
Endowment	1,176	161	1,337
Plant funds	3,464	887	4,351
Undesignated	127	664	791
Other*	446	275	721
TOTAL	$8,137	$2,006	$10,143

*Other includes: loan funds, trust funds, annuities, life insurance.

We consider the projected rate of payments on the pledges to be reasonable. Also, it should be known that the rate at which some pledges will be paid is dependent on performance of securities on the New York Stock Exchange. There are no known defaults on pledges, in part because we try to be careful to distinguish between promise and intent.

"Undesignated" funds are gifts received for capital campaign purposes, but not further restricted to a specific project. They are thus distinguished from "unrestricted" gifts (included in current operating funds) which have no specification whatsoever as to their use.

Although we have been informed that we are to be included in the bequests of many alumni and friends, any such dollar amounts are not included in campaign totals.

We do, however, include in our totals those irrevocable gifts to Lawrence from which the donor elects to receive income for his lifetime. We actually have possession of the principal in these cases (trust funds, annuities) as distinct from a bequest which is a revocable promise.

We had determined that we would not try to run a separate campaign for current operating funds lest we offer prospective (and many first time) donors too many and confusing choices. Enough unrestricted gifts were received, however, to provide $2.9 million for operating expenses over the period.

Dealing now with totals (cash plus pledges), let me record the sources of these funds ($000 omitted):

Alumni	$ 3,344
Business	1,684
Foundations	2,012
Government	1,194
Parents	32
Friends	1,877
Total	$10,143

Restricted gifts were received for the following endowment purposes ($000 omitted):

Endowed chairs	$ 53
Endowed scholarship	1,051
Other endowment	233
Total	$1,337

and for the following "Plant Funds":

Main Hall	$ 206,892
Library	3,556,095
Youngchild	371
Brokaw	243
Art Center	85
Gift of real estate and other
tangible property	529,906
Miscellaneous	57,580
Total	$4,351,136

Miscellaneous gifts in this context include gifts for specific purposes in or for buildings other than those named.

While all of us appreciate that Main Hall is not yet refurbished, a special plea was made for alumni support of this project. This resulted in gifts large enough to name several rooms, but no significantly large gift. Typically any successful fund raising campaign needs at least one gift for 10 percent to 20 percent of the goal, and this is the missing item on Main Hall.

Effort was made and is currently being made to find that large gift. Apparently the library was more attractive on the first round. We do try to persuade prospective donors to support specific projects; but when the decision has been made, we must abide by it.

The funds raised to date for Main Hall are held by the college, earmarked for that project, and they are accumulating interest.

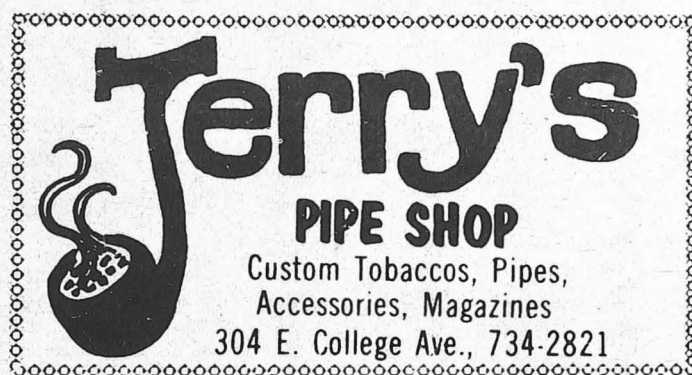

I hope this answers any questions, but I will be happy to respond to any other inquiry.

Cordially,
—DAVOL H. MEADER

Wopat earns All-American

Lawrence track standout Ron Wopat earned All-American status by placing fourth in the discus and fifth in the shotput in last weekend's NCAA Division III track championships. A sophomore at Lawrence, Wopat was a double winner in the Midwest Conference Track Championships held early in May.

This is the second year in a row that Wopat, a Lodi, Wisconsin native, has participated in the prestigious NCAA event. Coach Gene Davis is justified in saying that with Ron in the weight events, it's like money in the bank when the score is tallied.

Invitation to join a Revolution

Well, the Bicentennial spirit has finally caught up with us. We want to get on that red-white-and-blue bandwagon and start our own Revolution.

A revolution that says to all the prophets of doom: Phooey. Liberal arts graduates can, and do get jobs. Just ask one of the many seniors in this Class of '76 who have already nailed down a job for themselves. Now.

So, what (you say) does this have to do with a revolution. Well, if you're a junior now, or even a sophomore or freshman, you can start a revolution of your own. By getting started on exploring what you might want to do after you graduate.

That's nice (you say). How do I do that. Easier than crossing the Delaware on a silver dollar. Read on.

HOW ARE YOU GOING TO USE YOUR VACATION?
(Or: How to Interview for Information, and build some good contacts at the same time . . .)

Like most Lawrentians, you're probably going home for the long summer break. You might think about using that time to your best advantage, by interviewing for information.

How to do it? Simple. Just jot down three or four major occupational areas that you think you might want to pursue. These might be banking, journalism, advertising, sales, museum work, music publishing, or any variety of fields. Then:

(1) Use Career Center resources to identify those employers in your hometown area that have the kinds of positions you're looking for.

(2) Call or write the president or a major executive officer of the organization and request an appointment to see them, telling them that you are potentially interested in a career in that field, and ask them if they would be willing to meet with you to discuss their own careers, and opportunities in that field. Most will agree, since everyone likes to be asked for advice.

(3) Research that company or career area before you go to the interview, so that you can ask some intelligent questions. Ask for a tour of the facility.

(4) Assiduously AVOID ANY IMPLICATION THAT YOU ARE LOOKING FOR A JOB! You are there to become informed. People do not like to be asked for a job. It's immediately an adversary situation.

Human nature being what it is, the person you are interviewing will no doubt ask you about yourself, your background, your future plans. You will be getting a job interview, without having a job interview.

(5) At the conclusion of the interview, thank the individuals for their time and assistance. Write a followup note to them, thanking them again. Still DO NOT MENTION ANY INTEREST IN EMPLOYMENT.

(6) You might also ask them to suggest the names of others in their fields who might be willing to meet with you (e.g., other bankers, lawyers, etc.). Contact them in the same manner, and repeat the procedure.

Then, when you are ready for a summer job, or some sort of permanent employment, you have a ready-made list of contacts, to whom you can forward a resume, basing your cover letter on their previous meeting with you.

And just think what a surprise it will be to Mom and Dad, when you can come home after a summer well spent, telling them about what the job market is really like. Won't that be a revolution?
